

Pastor's Lines

Dear Church Family,

This is an excerpt of a blog from Christianity Today by Nicole Cliffe entitled, "How God Messed Up My Happy Atheist Life". As an atheist since college, I had already mellowed a bit over the previous two or three years, in the course of running a popular feminist website that publishes thoughtful pieces about religion....

There are two different starting points to my conversion, and sometimes I omit the first one, because I think it gives people an answer I don't want them to have. It is a simple story: I was going through a hard time. I was worried about my child. One time I said "Be with me" to an empty room. It was embarrassing. I didn't know why I said it, or to whom. I brushed it off, I moved on, the situation resolved itself, I didn't think about it again. I know how people hear that story: Oh, of course, Nicole was struggling and needed a larger framework for her life! That's part of the truth, but it's not the whole truth....

The second starting point is usually what I lead with. I was surfing the Internet and came across John Ortberg's CT obituary for philosopher Dallas Willard. John's daughters are dear friends, and I have always had a wonderful relationship with their parents, who struck me as sweetly deluded in their evangelical faith, so I clicked on the article.

Somebody once asked Dallas if he believed in total depravity. "I believe in sufficient depravity," he responded immediately. What's that? "I believe that every human being is sufficiently depraved that when we get to heaven, no one will be able to say, 'I merited this.'"

A few minutes into reading the piece, I burst into tears. Later that day, I burst into tears again. And the next day. While brushing my teeth, while falling asleep, while in the shower, while feeding my kids, I would burst into tears.

At this point, I reached a crossroads. I sat myself down and said: Okay, Nicole, you have two choices. Option One: you can stop reading books about Jesus. Option Two: you could think with greater intention about why you are overwhelmed by your emotions. It occurred to me that if Option Two proved fruitless, I could always return to Option One. So I emailed a friend who is a Christian, and I asked if we could talk about Jesus.

Now we reach the part of the story that gets a bit hand-wavy. About an hour before our call, I knew: I believed in God. Worse, I was a Christian. It was the opposite of being punk rock.

I instantly regretted sending that email and if humanly possible would have clawed it back through the Internet. Technology having failed me, my message reached its recipient. She said she would be very happy to talk to me about Jesus. You probably already know this, but Christians love talking about Jesus. I have been asked if deciding to become a Christian ended my exciting new crying-multiple-times-a-day hobby. The truth is that I continue to cry a lot more than I did before either Be-With-Me-Gate or the Dallas Willard Incident. I am more undone by love, or kindness, or friendship than I would have thought possible. In short, I "Got Faith"

I hope you "Get Faith" always, and especially today. Thank you kids for sharing your faith, Blessings, Dr. j

Church News

Our nursery is growing and is in need of additional volunteers on Sunday morning during the worship service. A total of 26 volunteers is the goal. If we have that many each volunteer would only be scheduled for two Sundays a year. Please contact Nancy Walters in the church office if you can fulfill this need.

The nursery is looking for an additional worker. If you would be interested in the position or would like more information please contact Nancy Walters in the church office.

VBS Meeting today, Sunday, May 21st at 3:30pm in the Family Life Center.
